

• Bird Watching •

When it's too cold for swimming and boating, the Lake McConaughy area is for the birds! It's one of the best bird-watching spots in the United States, with over 340 species counted. The bald eagle, America's national bird, usually visits in large numbers in early winter. During cold weather when ice has formed on other lakes and rivers, the eagles like to gather at Lake Ogallala. The Kingsley Dam hydroelectric plant creates open water, allowing them to catch fish, one of their favorite foods.
